TRUCE TALKS HANGING IN BALANCE

UN May Concede Kaesong Issue

Munsan, Nov. 2.

Truce talks in Korea hung in the balance today but there was mounting indication that the United Nations may back down on the Kaesong issue. Kaesong is the key to the Korean truce line.

The Joint Truce Committee will meet for the 10th day since the resumption of the talks at 11 a.m. on Saturday in an effort to solve the Kaesong issue—major barrier to a quick agreement on the armistice line.

The United Nations will take a "firm stand on Kaesong, historic invasion gateway to southern Korea." But the United Nations spokesman, Brigadier-General William Nickols, said that "adamant" was not the word to describe the United Nations position. That was the first indication that Kaesong may be abandoned to the Reds at the truce table. Webster's dictionary defines "adamant" as "unyielding."

The issue would appear to hinge on what the United Nations defines as "minor refinements" or "modifications" of the Allied proposal made on the first day of the new talks on October 25. The United Nations has said repeatedly that it would agree to no more than "minor refinements" in the United Nations proposal, but Gen. Nickols said the United Nations had not spelled out exactly what it considers minor refinements.

AVOID ULTIMATUM
Communist newsmen stressed repeatedly in Pan Man Jom roadside briefings that the Reds will never give up the city if it wrecks the truce talks. But the Communists avoided giving an ultimatum on the issue.

American officials expect long bargaining even if agreement were reached on a truce line in Korea.

When and if the United Nations and Communist military leaders negotiate an armistice, diplomats still will have to solve difficult problems such as political and territorial issues.

United States observers noted that agreement on a truce line was only now in sight—14 weeks after a five-point agenda had been drawn up at Kaesong. The truce line was the first major item on this agenda.

Still facing the negotiators are:

- 1.—Definite arrangements to end the shooting and supervise the truce. The Allies will demand unlimited supervision of all Korea to make sure that the Reds do not use the truce to build up their forces for a new blow. Russia and its satellites always have opposed admission of outsiders to their territories. The Allies will not settle for any Red pledges on this point. There probably will be talk of setting up some neutral observation commission that might be acceptable to the Communists.

WAR PRISONERS
2.—Arrangements for exchanging war prisoners. The Reds are expected to try to hold as many South Koreans as they can. The best guess is that these prisoners are undergoing intensive Communist indoctrination for possible future use as agents to infiltrate South Korea. In addition to the Western Powers Japan is still waiting for the Russians to release thousands of World War I German and Japanese prisoners.

3.—Withdrawal of foreign troops. The truce talks almost never got underway because of Red demands on this question. Experts recalled that the North Korean Radio had quoted North Korean General Nam Il in July to the effect that there was provision for the conference to "discuss the problem of withdrawal of foreign armies from Korea."

American officials said that this was a false interpretation. They said that a quick withdrawal of Allied troops would only clear the way for new attacks.—United Press.

Truman Farewells A "Wonderful Couple"

Washington, Nov. 2.

President Truman said goodbye today to a "wonderful couple who have so completely captured the hearts of all of us" and said he hoped that Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip would come back soon "and bring your lovely children."

Then, on a more solemn note, the President told Britain's future Queen and Royal Consort he hoped for the day when British and American labours for peace would make war "impossible in the world."

The President spoke his farewell and voiced his hopes for the future at a ceremony in White House Rose Garden, concluding the Royal couple's two-day visit shortly before they took off on their return flight to Canada.

Because of a cold drizzle which blotted out the capital's autumn colours, the ceremony was held under a moisture-proof canopy.

President Truman's remarks were in response to a brief speech by the 25-year-old Princess in which winding up "two very happy days as your guests" she gave the President an antique overmantle for the White House from her father, the King.

With the President to say "good-bye and come again" were Mrs. Truman and her daughter Margaret. Although the weather was very cloudy here and elsewhere on the coast, the Royal Party held its plan to fly back to Montreal aboard a big Canadian Royal Air Force transport.

In two hours before the Rose Garden ceremony, Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip made a whirlwind sightseeing trip to Washington Episcopal Cathedral where they paused briefly for prayers and to the Library of Congress, the Supreme Court and the Capitol.

At the Library they saw and asked questions about the glass-enclosed original of the Declaration of Independence in which the world threw off the yoke of the old.

At the Capitol the plan had been to manoeuvre them so that they would not see such reminders of past British discomforts as the painting of George Washington's final victory at Yorktown. But the Duke expressed interest in the paintings and the scene of Cornwall's surrender to Washington at Yorktown was pointed out to him.

In the Senate Chamber Princess Elizabeth sat momentarily in Vice-President Alben W. Barkley's chair in the rostrum.

In their 45-hour visit here the Princess and the Duke participated in two State dinners, four receptions and a couple of wreath-laying ceremonies.—United Press.

Presents His Credentials

Moscow, Nov. 2.

The new British Ambassador to the Soviet Union, Sir Alvaro de Sotomayor, told the Russians today he believed that a basis of understanding on current problems could be reached with goodwill and sincerity on both sides.

Presenting his credentials to the Soviet President, Mr. Nikolai Svirnik, he pledged as a first step to do everything possible to strengthen Anglo-Soviet relations.

He declared that he hoped that the Soviet Government would offer the fullest understanding and co-operation since it was his earnest desire to work closely toward contributing to easing international unrest.

Churchill-Harriman Meeting

First Of Top-Level Conferences

London, Nov. 2.

Prime Minister Winston Churchill met Mr. W. Averell Harriman today in the first of a series of top-level Anglo-American conferences which probably will lead to a Churchill-Truman talk in Washington next month.

Mr. Harriman, President Truman's top trouble shooter, flew into London from Washington on the way to Paris to begin his new job as Mutual Security Administrator.

He drove from the airport straight to No. 10 Downing Street for a luncheon meeting with Mr. Churchill, the Foreign Secretary, Mr. Anthony Eden, and the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. R. A. Butler.

The four old friends began discussions which Mr. Churchill hopes will bring him a most desired and needed Christmas present—more military and economic aid from the United States.

SECOND CHAPTER

The second chapter in the new Churchill Government's move to improve Anglo-American relations will take place in Paris on Sunday. Then, Mr. Eden will have his first talk with the United States Secretary of State, Mr. Dean Acheson, preliminary to a "Big Three" meeting on Monday, the third man being the French Foreign Minister, Mr. Robert Schuman.

Mr. Acheson is also expected to see Mr. Churchill before he returns to Washington from the United Nations meetings in Paris.

Then, next month, probably after the Parliamentary recess about mid-December, Mr. Churchill probably will be on his way to the White House where he spent much time with the late President Roosevelt during World War II.

Besides more aid for Britain Mr. Churchill and Mr. Harriman probably will discuss Britain's disputes with Iran and Egypt and Britain's rearmament programme.

Mr. Churchill also planned to hold the third Cabinet meeting of the week today.—United Press.

RAF Planes Join In Canal Zone Operations

MANY EGYPTIAN WORKERS DESERTING JOBS

Fayid, Nov. 2.

Royal Air Force spotter planes are keeping watch over the zone by day while at night British troops guard strategic points and secret scientific devices against possible armed intruders.

The British forces, now including seasoned troops who fought Jewish terrorists in Palestine, are ready for anything.

The blackout on news of Egyptian workers deserting jobs with the British authorities has continued, but there were many indications today that the degree of defection was considerable.

Many officers had to make their own beds and in many messes a "serve yourself" system was introduced.

Egyptians, yielding to threats and intimidation from anti-British elements, were pulling out in large numbers.

The Egyptian manager of an officers' club at Ismailia was today threatened for the "third and last time" by a group of hoodlums that he would be burned alive if he continued to work for the British.

By sunrise today British sailors from this cruiser and other warships had moored and clipped some 250 ships using the Suez Canal.

More than 100 of these vessels were non-British, including American, French, Italian, Dutch, Danish, Panamanian and Liberian.

The new daylight convoy scheme was working well, and an average of 27 ships daily are passing through the Canal with a few sailing at night with their own lights.

Shops were shuttered in Port Said today as tradesmen feared anti-British agitators might foment riots with the close of the Moslem Sabbath.

A British armoured patrol reported a small amount of stone throwing.—Reuter.

Mr. Alan Lennox-Boyd becomes Minister of State for Colonial Affairs in the Conservative Government of Mr. Winston Churchill. It was officially announced tonight.

Miss Florence Horsburgh becomes Minister of Education. She is the only woman among Mr. Churchill's Ministers.

Other appointments were: Minister of State for Scotland—The Earl of Home.

Lord Advocate—Mr. James Clyde.

Parliamentary Under-Secretaries of State for Scotland—Commander Thomas Dunlop Galbraith and Mr. W. McNair Snadden.

It was also announced tonight that Sir Thomas Dugdale, newly appointed Minister of Agriculture and Fisheries, Mr. Lennox-Boyd and Mr. Clyde are to become Privy Counsellors. None of the appointments announced today carries Cabinet rank.—Reuter.

COMMENT OF THE DAY

HK's Juvenile Delinquency

THE Colony is advised by Mr. Peterson, Principal Probationary Officer, not to view with alarm the fact that there were 54,000 cases of juvenile delinquents last year. Nevertheless, the figure hardly calls for complacency. The compelling and dangerous aspect of juvenile delinquency is that unless its incidence can be firmly controlled and gradually reduced, an increasing number of youthful miscreants evolve into adult criminals. This, to some extent, explains the swelling number of men and women who have to be sent to our prisons. Whether or not the number of juvenile offenders can be considered alarming in their proportion to the Colony's total population, there is no denying they represent a serious social problem. The natural question is whether Government is doing all, or anything like it should, to eradicate juvenile delinquency. While it is true that probationary schools exist, and while Government offers moral and some practical support to the Boys and Girls' Clubs, official policy does not appear to be vigorously directed toward prevention of juvenile delinquency. Police officers and magistrates are confronted with a distasteful task. The wayward youngsters have to be dealt with according to the law, but facilities for following up correction with a curative treatment are pitifully inadequate. Social and religious organizations do their best, but the problem has reached proportions beyond them to resolve. Moreover, the situation is aggravated by the fact that most of the young offenders are victims of their environment and upbringing. Case history in abundance is available to show that many children in Hong-kong are driven to thieving, illegal hawking, and a host of other petty offences by lawless parents and guardians. Their chances of permanent escape from these injurious influences and environment are negligible. Mr. Peterson declares that schooling is not enough, and all who have any appreciation of the problem will agree with him. These children require proper homes where they come under the correct sort of persuasive influence; somewhere where they can be socially as well as scholastically educated. The challenge confronts the community as much as it does Government. Juvenile delinquency is not yet out of hand, but it could easily become so with the existing inadequate means of combating it at source. Government could and must do more in acknowledging its prime responsibility for dealing with juvenile delinquency, for the persistent presence in increasing numbers of these youthful delinquents is a growing menace to the social and legal fabric of the Colony. Two propositions advance themselves: either the provision of more Government-controlled homes, run on enlightened lines for these unfortunate children, or more generous official financial support for voluntary organizations and institutions which are today doing their utmost to tackle the problem. The whole question, it is readily admitted, is difficult and complex, but it is just these factors which make it essential that the problem be tackled intelligently, generously, and with vision, even if this means slightly straining the Colony's finances.

Your Radio Listening For Next Week In Detail—A "China Mail" Feature

"Down Memory Lane" Celebrates Its Fourth Anniversary On Tuesday

When the well-known strains of the signature tune "Diane" take the air at 7.30 on Tuesday evening, they will mark the fourth anniversary of one of the most popular of all Radio Hongkong's programmes.

For four years, without a single break, Aileen Woods has presented her own special programme "Down Memory Lane" to the delight of thousands of listeners; indeed, as one very prominent resident of the Colony puts it "I never miss 'Memory Lane' if I can possibly help it."

So, when this widely appreciated programme ends for the 212th time on Tuesday, there will doubtless be countless listeners who, echoing the words of the closing tune, will say to Aileen Woods—"Thanks for the Memory."

Good, crisp, fast-moving thriller, neatly packaged into eight half-hour episodes have always been well-received by radio audiences, and now we have another Philip Odell story written by Lester Powell—"The Lady on the Screen".

The first episode of this adventure, in which Robert Beatty again plays the part of Odell, the private detective with the Irish brogue, comes tomorrow night at 7.15.

Jane Austen's posthumously published novel "Persuasion" has been adapted as a radio serial in three parts, the first of which comes next Friday night from 10.15 to 11.15.

"Persuasion" is for the most part a gentle, tender story, and although it may not contain any of Jane Austen's more memorable characters, in none of her books are they brought into being with more fluency or so cleverly contrasted.

The strong cast in the BBC adaptation is headed by Michael Denison and Dulcie Gray, and the programme is produced by Mary Hope Allen from a script by H. Oldfield. The second and final episodes will be broadcast over Radio Hongkong on the following two Friday evenings at the same time.

The guest speakers on "Saturday Roundup" this evening at 8.15 will be Noel Monks, the well-known Daily Mail Correspondent, and Ivor Daniel, who last week returned to civilian life in Hongkong after a year's service with the Royal Ulster in Korea.

"Cantonese by Radio" is beginning again at Lesson 1 on Tuesday at 6.30 when the Hon. R. R. Todd, Secretary for Chinese Affairs, is broadcasting this series of broadcasts which have proved invaluable to those who aspire to a working knowledge of the spoken language.

(Broadcasting on a frequency of 845 kilocycles per second and on 9.52 megacycles per second in the 31 metre band).

ITALY'S STAR MAKER

No one in Italy rates higher in the world of entertainment than Vittorio de Sica. For, besides being one of Italy's top two directors (the other is Rossellini), he is also one of the country's best-known actors.

He looks it. He has a fine, strong face. His hair is greying at the temples. He uses his hands to emphasize every point of his conversation. Like Rossellini he oozes charm.

His office in Rome is both tasteful and luxurious. Which is as it should be. For de Sica earns £25,000 or more a film.

His most recently shown production, "Miracle in Milan," a story which hovers between reality and 'fabric,' has been acclaimed as one of the most unusual films ever made.

Some odd things happen in it, certainly. For instance, there is a young negro who loves a white girl. But he never dares to tell her of his love because of the colour of his skin. Then, a miracle occurs.

Everyone can wish what they want and their wishes come true. Immediately, the negro wishes himself white and rushes to declare his love to the girl. But she has made a wish, too. She is now black.

LIFE OF FATHER

Recently de Sica has completed another unusual picture, "Umberto D"—unusual because the leading characters are an old man of 68 and a girl of 17.

As always de Sica has unknowns playing these parts. To play the title role, that of a retired civil servant who finds it impossible to live on his absurdly meagre pension (de Sica has based this character on his own father's experiences), he engaged a Professor of ancient languages whom he found at the University of Florence.

The professor, his name is Batisti, promptly resigned from the faculty and has now embarked on a belated career as an actor.

Both he and the girl, an unknown named Maria Casaglin, says their director, "give magnificent interpretations." So Italy now has two more prospective stars.

NOT FORGOTTEN

De Sica's next film will be as an actor. He will play the leading role in a comedy, "Good Morning, Elephant."

"Very difficult making a film with an elephant," he said, adding that he hoped the Elephant Boy himself, Sabu, would be available to play an Indian in the picture.

Because of de Sica's preoccupation with poverty—all the above-mentioned films are concerned with penurious characters—he has often been accused of being a Communist. Is he?

"I am not," he says. "If I emphasize the plight of the poor it is because I am a Christian. That is a totally different thing. I am a family man."

SOME FILLUM!

The small, elfin-like priest was just about the last person I expected to see at an Italian film studio. But there he was, looking exactly as he did in "Going My Way" with pipe in mouth, hands in pockets, striding up and down outside Stage 2 at the Cinecittà Studios.

"Yes," said Barry Fitzgerald. "I'm making an interesting little film here. It's called 'Top of the Class' and it's about a priest who inherits a fortune. No, I don't speak Ectavian. They'll dub in a new voice for me in the Ectavian version."

Along with Mr Fitzgerald in the film are a number of Irish actors, including his brother, Arthur Shields, and Una O'Connor. The leading lady is Lois Maxwell, who a few weeks ago was making "The Woman's Angle" at Ectavia, and once was a leading lady in Hollywood.

"Those days are over now," she says. "I'm in love with Italy." And I might add, with an Italian.

ORPHAN STAR

The star of "Never Take No for an Answer," a British film made in Italy, is a 9-year-old boy, Vittorio Marzulli. He has probably had a more eventful life than most actors five times his age.

He was orphaned at four, his father being killed during the war and his mother, shot during a street battle, Rigor mortis had set in before Vittorio was 10 ed from her arms.

For the next year and a half he was the problem child of an orphanage—wild, villainous, argumentative and almost unmanageable.

Then, along with two other Italian children, he was adopted by the American-born Countess of Berkeley. It was at her Italian home that Anthony Havelock-Allan and Mrs Paul Gallico (the wife of the author of the film) first saw him.

I am told he gives a remarkable performance in the film. Sooner or later, I expect, he will be visiting Britain. For Lady Berkeley is the chairman of Berkeley Castle, the oldest inhabited home in England.

NOTED AT RANDOM

Nine out of every ten of these "wonderful Italian film actors" have their dialogue spoken for them by less photogenic types.

A Naples cinema advertisement for a film presented by "J. Arthur Crank." Only British film on view in Rome is "Incredible Adventure of Mr. Hillman"—"Lavender Hill Mob" to you. Only British play in the town is "The Cocktail Party."

There's a stereoscopic colour film system being developed in Milan which they say will revolutionise film making. Sylvano Mangano, the "Bitter Rice" girl, is expecting a baby.

Biggest box-office draw throughout Italy is a comedian named Totò, who's quite unknown elsewhere. Advice to tourists: When in Rome don't do as the Americans do—it's too expensive.

Why Britain lies third in The race for That Big Bang

Russia explodes second A-bomb

THE RUSSIANS KNEW THROUGH Dr. PONTECORVO WHAT GENERAL MORGAN FOUND OUT

by CHAPMAN PINCHER

BEFORE someone starts up the legend that Professor Bruno Pontecorvo built Russia's new atom bomb, let me point out that Soviet scientists staged an atom explosion a year before the ex-Italian professor fled from Britain.

Pontecorvo may have given the Russians some of Britain's secret "know-how." But he is more likely to have delighted them with his disclosures of the astonishing extent of Britain's "don't know-how."

Russia's latest bomb test underlines the fact that after five years' intensive effort, at a cost of £38,000,000, Britain is now lying a bad third.

Shaken?

EXACTLY how far we are behind is now being explained to the new boss of the atom project, D-Day planner, General Sir Frederick Morgan, who is making his first tour of the Government's six huge atom stations.

The other day he visited the uranium 235 plant at Capenhurst, Cheshire, which was begun nearly two years ago. What he saw there—or rather did not see—must have shaken him. Sir Frederick now knows why no plant has yet been installed.

The Supply Ministry planners have not yet even decided what gadgets for making uranium 235 will be used there.

The outlook is not much brighter at Sellafield, the Government's other atom explosive plant in West Cumberland.

Two big uranium furnaces have been built there. But they cannot be put into production until a plant to extract the explosive from them is completed.

A hint as to how long this will take is given by the fact that the atom bomb testing ground now being built in Australia will not be ready for about 18 months.

So by the time we test our first atomic bomb we shall be about three and a half years behind Russia.

Lords know

AFTER visiting U.S. atom plants I gauge that we are seven to ten years behind the Americans.

Why has Britain jogged on so slowly?

Lord Cherwell, Winston Churchill's wartime adviser, pinpointed the cause in the House of Lords four months ago. Speaking for hundreds of other scientists he urged the Government to take the atom project out of the hands of the civil servants.

Bureaucrats may be able to move quickly when under the results-or-else compulsion that exists in Russia, but not in a democracy.

This has been fully recognised in America.

"In the U.S. atom project free-enterprisers outnumber civil servants by 16 to 1," said Mr Gordon Dean, dapper chief of the U.S. Atom Commission when we talked in Washington.

In Britain the Government's grip is so tight that the atom factories are not only controlled by desk-bound civil servants, but operated by scientists and engineers forced into the Civil Service strait-jacket.

Go-getters

AMERICA'S giant bomb plants are operated for the Government by private firms working on go-getting business principles. Even the research laboratories, like the Argonne laboratory near Chicago which I toured, have been kept out of the Civil Service. They are run by universities with business men

The astonishing story of the 'Lost' Soviet war brides

RUSSIA'S Secret Police are now ready to close their thick dossiers on the case of the Soviet War Brides—one of the most shameful episodes in the history of Anglo-Soviet postwar relations.

That is the meaning behind the week's bizarre happenings outside the Bolshoi Theatre, Moscow, when Mrs Irada Rickitts, the Soviet-born wife of an official at the Science Museum, London, was kidnapped and later "released."

Only one bride is now free, and she is virtually a prisoner in the British Embassy where she lives with her six-year-old son.

There were five of the original 15 war brides still at liberty in Moscow when I arrived there in October 1949 to take over the editorship of the Foreign Office's Russian magazine, British Ally.

I knew them all, shared their fears and their hopes, and occasionally acted as their escort. Only with someone enjoying diplomatic privileges could they move outside the gates of their homes.

Now that there is little, if any, hope left for their reprieve it is possible to tell the full story of their grim ordeal at the hands of the M.V.D.—the Secret Police—an ordeal which they bore for six years.

by RICHARD JONES
Former Editor of British Ally, the magazine the Foreign Office published in Moscow.

Because they married foreigners and firmly refused to renounce their husbands they were ostracised by their own families.

Some were turned out of their homes, some found sanctuary in the flat basement of the Press Department of the British Embassy. Two were permitted to stay on with their adoptive mothers.

No Russian would dare take them. They were banned from employment by any Soviet agency and deprived of all civil rights although they were regarded as Soviet citizens by the law.

A 24-hour guard on the gates of the Press Department ensured that they did not leave the premises unnoticed.

When they went outside with a member of the diplomatic staff they were trailed by plain-clothes men.

If they received callers the visitors had to show their identity documents to the militiamen on duty.

Inside they were spied on by the Russian staff. Two of them were employed as telephonists. Often, after mysterious telephone calls, I would find them in tears. They would never divulge the identity of the caller or the messages.

Occasionally plain-clothes detectives called on them. It was after one of these visits that two of the brides, Mrs Lola Burke wife of an Ealing bank official, and Mrs Rosa Henderson, whose husband is now in Canada, attempted suicide.

Both took an overdose of aspirin and were found unconscious by another wife.

Doctors from the American and British embassies revived them. Time and again the M.V.D. intensified their efforts to break the girls' morale. Sometimes it was a request to meet someone outside. They did not walk into the trap.

For more than five years the girls lived in fear. They had seen other wives vanish overnight, some sent to Siberia.

I was here when the first of the five brides was kidnapped in June last year. Mrs Burke had gone to spend the night at the home of Mrs Bolton's mother.

She left the house unaccompanied the following morning, and was bundled into a car and taken to the Lubianka Prison.

Accompanied by embassy officials and her mother to see her failed. Nobody could find out on what charge she had been taken in. Nobody has heard of her since.

The four remaining brides were terrified. They rarely moved outside their quarters for six months.

Then one night in March this year Mrs Henderson went outside. Mrs Bolton disappeared a few days later. Neither has been heard of since.

Embassy officials were snubbed by the police authorities; told it was not their business.

After these three disappearances, Mrs Hall and Mrs Rickitts were given quarters in an annexe in the British Embassy grounds.

Outside the embassy gates uniformed guards reinforced by plain-clothes men also kept a constant watch on their movements.

Recently Mrs Rickitts made the fatal mistake of visiting the theatre with a member of the embassy who did not enjoy diplomatic status.

It was the moment for which the M.V.D.'s agents had been waiting.

It was her brother who betrayed her. As she was leaving a performance of the ballet at the Bolshoi he pointed her out to a squad of plain-clothes men. They pushed her into the taxi, which her escort had called and drove off.

Mrs Rickitts's brother did not meet her there by chance. He was there by arrangement with the police—it was the penalty he had to pay for his five-year failure to make her agree to divorce her British husband.

Nobody who has met Irada Rickitts, and I knew her well, can doubt that I was under dire threats that she denied she was ever kidnapped.

Her friends, and they were many in the foreign community in Moscow, know that the story she told at an obviously arranged interview with the Western correspondents doesn't ring true.

But the M.V.D. have won half their battle with her. She will no longer have any contact with the world outside her mother's home. Her brother, an ardent Communist, is her guard. She will not be allowed any foreign visitors. She is under close house arrest, though that is not the way the M.V.D. describe it.

She can easily be transferred, as other Soviet brides have, to a concentration camp without anyone being the wiser.

The other night I spoke on the telephone to a friend in Moscow who gave this reassuring message: "Nobody will break Ira's spirit. She's tough and will stand up, as she has done all the time, to any brow-beating."

Then came this ominous reply: "I'm taller than you, but I'm not tall enough to look through this knot-hole from the ground."

REPORT ON SOME INTERESTING EXPERIMENTS

ONE-DRINK DRIVERS

By Joseph Garrity

SEVERE tests which included "reversing on a seven-inch wide plank" have been carried out on 37 expert motorists in Sweden to test their reactions to alcohol.

Dr. Leonard Goldberg of Sweden's Caroline Institute organised the experiment. The 37 drivers had to drive at speed out of L-shaped paths, steer in confined spaces, and brake and start in deep sand.

Their powers of concentration and judgment were carefully studied. Then they were split into two groups — drinkers and teetotalers.

Drinks were served to the drinkers and the test was resumed over the same course, all drivers being "apparently sober".

On the second run the drinkers were slower, but the teetotalers were 20 per cent more successful than on the first attempt.

Dr. Goldberg reports that the drinkers suffered from over-confidence, inferior judgment, and poor concentration.

DAINGEROUS

One of them was unaware he had knocked down a row of marking poles, another did not know his car had slipped off the plank.

A third became so furious at his failure to back on to the plank that he made 15 attempts without even changing his methods.

After analysing individual times and faults Dr. Goldberg came to the conclusion that "even a slight amount of alcohol caused a deterioration of the driving performance of expert drivers."

The Swedish experiment confirmed experiments made in Britain by Dr. H. M. Vernon, an adviser to the National Institute of Industrial Psychology.

Vernon's researches proved that some motorists could become dangerous drivers after drinking only one half glass of mild beer.

Small doses of alcohol, he found, not only impaired judgment and concentration but produced slower physical responses of the eyes, hands, and feet.

IMPAIRMENT

The Swedish and British tests also proved that after one or two drinks a driver's vision deteriorated by as much as 32 percent.

"Alcohol," said Dr. Goldberg, "has the same effect on vision as driving with sunglasses in twilight or darkness."

Although the drivers in these tests were proved to be a road menace they were safe from the law.

They suffered no slurred speech, unsteady gait, or other signs of intoxication on which the police could base a charge.

Dr. J. Arthur Gorsky, Metropolitan Police surgeon, in a paper on alcohol's relation to accidents says that the first effect of alcohol and the effect of the smallest doses, is upon the highest functions of the brain.

This infuses the individual with a temporary happiness and sociability but leads to an impairment of judgment, concentration, self-criticism, and the power of estimating risks.

The scientific facts, says Dr. Gorsky, present "a serious objection to the consumption of alcohol, even in small amounts, by anyone who is to drive a car."

EXPLODED

The drink-improves-driving theory is exploded by a report on accidents, which states:—

"Even where there is no question of drunkenness, a small quantity of alcohol is for many drivers most dangerous."

"It is essential that these drivers and the public should realise that 'under the influence of drink' does not necessarily mean intoxication in the ordinary sense, but that driving skill is affected long before a man is consciously under the influence of alcohol."

How soon after taking a drink is it safe to drive?

No matter what quantity is imbibed the body cannot eliminate alcohol at a faster rate than 10 c.c. per hour. This means that the effects of one large whisky will not wear off completely until three hours after it has been swallowed.

The period is correspondingly longer for each drink—1944 hrs. after drinking half a bottle of whisky.

Some countries have tackled the problem by forbidding motorists to drink while driving. In Norway it is illegal to sell beer to motorists.

In Madras, India, where prohibition is in force, there were no arrests for drunken driving in the last recorded year.

America sticks a goose quill in the caps of The Upper Crust

EVELYN WEBBER buys a new magazine with sample mania

AN exotic new magazine which sells for $2.10 a copy has just bubbled into life over here. It is designed, say the publishers, for "those" people who have never relished the banal or the commonplace.

And Gentry, as it is called, contains everything from a free sample of marjoram herb pasted on the cooking page to a complete (and also free) architect's blueprint on how to build a Finnish steam bath in your cellar.

"We doubt whether many of our readers will ever actually get down to the job of building a steam bath," says Gentry frankly. "But isn't it a pleasant idea to toy with?"

On an essay on "The melodies and rhythms in nature," "Don't we know," says Gentry, "that Beethoven composed a full symphony around such motifs? And won't it be impressive next time you walk through the countryside with a friend to say, 'That bird is chirping in E flat major 4-5 tempo'?"

STICK-ONS

Gentry is published, say its publishers, "for the 100,000 thinking men in America." (Total population of America is 150,000,000.)

There is a piece ("Not too many words," the editors say encouragingly) on old cars, but the magazine simply pictures the cars. Not much thinking to do about that.

A new clothes fashion is given and a sample of the fabric attached to the page. Irresistible to the sense of touch. But no thinking involved here either.

The wildest addition is to a poem about wild geese—some sample goose quills. (This, possibly, at the insistence of Miss Corn Carlyle, one of the editors of this magazine for men, who once wrote a best-seller on how to get a husband.)

"The addition of stick-ons and samples," say the publishers, "introduces a new and effective kind of 'reading by touch'."

STAR PIECE

"After the first few pages—crammed with shirt and suit advertisements to which cuttings of the advertisers' cloth have been attached—you find yourself automatically running your hand over all the pictures in the magazine as soon as your eye falls on them, and whether anything is attached to them or not."

But "What it means to be a man" is Gentry's star piece—"worth the two dollars a copy for that alone," according to Gentry.

With the article comes at least two dollars' worth of material media in the form of three layers of stick-on pictures. First layout shows a man's skeleton, then a picture of his muscles and sinews superimposed on top of that, and then on top of it all comes a picture of the figure of a Greek god.

"Gentry," says Gentry, "will either date the top hundred thousand thinking men in this country, or be a miserable flop. Frankly we do not know which."

R. M. MacCOLL American Column MacA. steps in

DOESN'T it seem an age since MacArthur crashed the world's front pages last spring? Then came silence, and many people concluded that the general had chosen the serene obscurity of retirement.

Not so. Up pops MacA. in flag-decked Miami to let go with a terrific blast at Truman's Oriental policies—and he gets an ovation from his audience of American Legionnaires (they are members of the largest and most politically important ex-Servicemen's organisation).

It was the generally bitter outburst, yet. He ended with the Government to rid the world of the "secret plan to hand over Panama to the Communists," and he insisted that American aid for Europe should be limited to ships and planes.

His speech lasted 45 minutes—and was interrupted 40 times by prolonged applause. Bagley, one of all greeted the words of the Korea negotiator and negotiator, never seeming to learn that you can't profitably negotiate with Communists any more than you can with any other monster in a civilised society.

Even if MacA. does not himself run for President, next year, it is now obvious that he intends to do his best to make things tough for Truman.

ERI

ONE INDUSTRY that complains of no material shoe sales is the shoe trade. But, to prove their ingenuity just in case, the big "Spring Style Show" just opened in Boston they are exhibiting shoes containing fabric uppers and synthetic crepe soles.

EXPERTS investigating an accident wave in a U.S. factory blamed the card game Canasta. Wives were playing until long past midnight, they said, and their husbands got tired at work for lack of proper breakfasts.

PRACTICALLY EVERYBODY gets sharply ticked off in the report of a Senate committee which has been studying the problem of ethics in public life. The committee, run by Paul Douglas, an Illinois Democrat, and Douglas's grandfather, who died 58 years ago, about "the executive branch of Government" (a police way of referring to the Truman administration). Then it remarks that "the general public must be kept from being too sympathetic."

In fact, the group of society is in a position to point the finger of scorn at others.

NOVAL NEWS

In America's Noval News, Boston has not only reported the last installment of a $425 million made in 1941, but has done so five years later.

In that dark wartime year, it was reported to put up by value.

The American newspaper was said to be the only one in the world to have a news item which has gone on for so long. But it said, now it is all settled up, the price of the news item will return to Boston.

THREE SEAMEN

were arrested in a New York restaurant on drug-managing charges. Asked where they kept their drugs, they led the police to a safe deposit vault in a Wall Street bank. In the vault was $14,000 worth of assorted dope.

THE BIG aircraft factories on the Pacific Coast are having such a hard time finding workers in these days of full employment that, says one big boss, "we may be starting to ring doorbells next."

TWO-WAY FASHION TRAFFIC

By Dorothy Barkley

LONDON. TWO-WAY fashion traffic between London and Paris becomes more significant than ever with the showing in London of models by leading Paris couturiers and the sale in Paris of styles by a London designer.

Twenty-two leading Paris designers selected three of their new season's models, sent them to London where they were displayed in a splendid all-star show.

But the real star of the occasion was wool. It is curious how long it has taken fashion designers in general, and Paris in particular, to realise how versatile this fabric is, and how suitable for all occasions from dawn to dusk.

Perhaps, if you happen to be sweltering under the tropical sun, or anticipating summer in the antipodes, wool clothes would seem to have no place at all in your wardrobe. But did you know that the weight of the finest wool is only one ounce per square yard? (Compare this with the average suit weight of thirteen ounces!)

SEA-BATH REDUCER

PARIS. FRENCH beauty experts say they have a new, quick method of reducing by sea-bathing in the bath.

The sea-bath, with motor-driven waves at the rate of two per second to beat off extra pounds painlessly, was a star attraction at the opening of the Salon of Woman and Beauty at the Palais du Glace, sponsored by Paris hairdressers.

All the ladies' deepest secrets were out, as an audience of at least half male, crowded round stalls exhibiting bust developers, rubber massage rollers, chicken-embryo preparations to remove wrinkles, and the basic elements of powder, rouge and lipstick.

The sea-bath has French medical approval and is said to "wash away" as much as 35 pounds in a few weeks of 20-minute daily baths. It is a tank which fits into a bathtub, and makes nearly as much noise as genuine surf.

Colourful Lingerie

ONCE looked upon with scorn as something devoid of style and old-fashioned, the cotton nightdress, like other items of cotton lingerie, has become a darling of the mode and very high style. Cotton pillow is used for this one, a weave that requires nary a touch of iron. The colour is a sunny shade of yellow with black and white embroidery for the sleeves and cuffs and a black and white pattern for the bodice. It is a nice choice for college or career girl, and its dark green make it right when nights grow a bit chilly.

It is like gossamer to touch; it has more in common with silk chiffon than wool, and shimmers with every movement. It is, strange as this may seem, the perfect material for evening dresses!

Mme. Schiaparelli was the first Paris designer to use wool for evening, and before the war she had the own with an evening coat made from the same material as a Guesdemar's uniform. Now all Paris designers use wool evening dresses. Schiaparelli herself shows a "honey" gown in black wool, the style delightfully simple, the colour effect with a bright green belt. Other designs showed included a white wool jersey ensemble, a white wool gown embroidered with emeralds, and a tartan wool-muslin sheath dress.

At this show, arranged by the International Wool Secretariat, women had their curiosity about Paris fashions satisfied.

The new silhouette? Very feminine, stressing the natural lines of the figure, wider skirts which reintroduce comfort into clothes.

The types of wool? Velours, coarse "knubby" tweeds, houndstooth and shepherds'.

paid, jet-spangled wool crepes, broadcloths, novelty weaves—wool jersey in grey, green and mauve stripes, silky haired "fur" weaves.

The colours? Parma violet, hazel nut, petrol-green, pink-blossom, and grey in all its shades. This season white is a colour in its own right; (if you live in a tropical climate, or know how to keep it white). White mink trimming on a black wool suit, white wool topcoat with black astrakhan collar and black patent leather belt, white broadcloth dress under cive-calfur coat lined with white broadcloth. One designer lines a yellow tweed coat with violet; another combines a red knitted jumper with a black and white tweed coat and skirt, and lines the coat with the same material as the jumper.

Now we give some details (with illustrations) of the new styles. Attention focuses on capes and collars; many of the collars can also be worn as a hood.

Brugere's scarlet plush topcoat, with unpressed pleats at the back. (Fashion note: the enormous collar which can be lifted and worn as a hood; top centre).

Tailored blanket cloth afternoon coat by Jacques Heim. (Fashion note: the colour is white, with black astrakhan trimming; top right).

Maggie Rouff's informal coat in dark grey wool, tightly belted. (Fashion note: the upstanding, chin-hugging collar, with its three saucer buttons; below right).

Maggie Rouff's black wool dress with pleated skirt. (Fashion note: the belt, placed high, and embroidered with sequins; below centre).

And there are the usual Parisian details—"fads" as we call them here: a dress with a one-sided basque, or an umbrella with a built-in working order—in the handle.

All this was fascinating for the average woman with a desire to be fashionable; it was also tantalising, for the price of each dress was in the region of £200!

While London women were admiring these Paris fashions, copies of styles by Norman Hartnell were on sale in Paris shops at a fraction of the cost of their originals. It is reported that they are selling "like hot cakes."

BREAKAWAY PRINCESS

LONG LIVE the New Princess! Newly slender, newly elegant, and so pretty. In the pictures of the royal tour, Princess Elizabeth cuts a figure of elegance that she has never shown before.

Gone are dressmakerly suits, the large and lavish hats, the posies, the general air of an unsophisticated little girl dressing up as a Princess.

In place of the slim skirts that aren't slim enough, the full skirts that are only moderately full, in place of the nervous approach to any new fashion—here is a young woman of unassuming elegance with small hair, shorter hair, expensively simple suits. And a sensationally fashionable outline.

How has it happened? More than half the reason, is the Princess's own decision to take her dressing seriously.

Her first move was to pick a dressmaker for herself.

She chose Mr. Hardy Amies, a man who made his name in tailored clothes, a man who has never made anything for the Royal Family before.

And having picked her man, she has worn his designs without altering a line.

Long live the Tailormade Princess, say I. She has broken away, at last from the haze of pastel buff that has dominated every handbook on What A Princess Should Wear.

One woman's answer comes from Madame Avignon.

ONE: The simple leaf coat in colour. TWO: The hipped waistline and slightly rounded neckline achieved with canvas lining.

THREE: It has a "Duster coat" in the same yellow jersey lined with matching ottoman silk.

BIG DATE? READY IN NO TIME!

EVERY girl should know how to look her best at short notice. It happens sometimes that you are planning a quiet, restful evening with that exciting mystery story when the telephone clangs. Some member of your special gang reports that a party is on and your delightful presence is requested. A big date will call for you. Ho-hum! Why couldn't it have been another night after you had spent part of the day getting the works at the beauty shop?

Suppose you have a half-hour at your disposal. Take an alternating hot and cold shower. Nothing like it to flood away the fatigue bugs of the day's activities. Give yourself a rubdown with a fragrant lotion to make you smell sweet. Dip a heavy washcloth in cold water, press it to your eyes, lie down for five minutes to catch your breath and compose your mind.

Go over your face and neck with a cleansing cream; pat it in to bring colouring. Remove the cream with tissues, then use an astringent. It's nice to resort to a powder base of the same colouring as your skin, but be sure to include your neck so there will not be a low-water mark.

Cream rouge will stay by you longer than the compact if the party is to be one that continues into the wee small hours. Put it on in dots, then blend. Cream rouge is not as popular as it should be.

So far, so good. If your frock is a slip-over affair you cannot arrange your hairdo before you get into it. Be sure to protect the shoulders of your dress so no stray hairs will be there after you have put your waves and curls in order. Then apply lipstick.

The bath, the rub down, the session with make-up will create a certain stimulation. The day's weariness will be forgotten. The girl who looked tired in the mirror is another creature with eyes sparkling, complexion clear, hairdo in apple-pie order. And it all can be done in thirty minutes by the clock.

"Exercise and a rubdown will keep me in shape," she confided.

IT'S TRAIN TIME. A big storage drawer slides under benches that can be used for seating or play and provides a place for trains.

By JOAN O'SULLIVAN

A PLAY room should be a gay room, but, more important, it should be a place where the child's storage space is plenty for toys and games.

This is the type of room that architect Joseph Aronson has designed for youngsters. Realising that cramped quarters are almost everybody's problem these days, he's built units that do double-duty, providing play areas as well as space to store toys.

Put all the units together—as they are in Mr. Aronson's model room—and it adds up to a play-time paradise. Parents with limited space, however, might make just one or two of the units. They're sure to turn bedroom, cellar or attic areas into fun for small fry.

Any youngster would be enchanted by a penthouse-playhouse. Designed to fit conveniently into a room corner, it has a rooftop that can be used as a stage, playground or sleeping quarters. Stairs leading to the penthouse utilise, for additional play purposes, space that might otherwise have been wasted. Under the stairs is a garage for wheel toys.

There are two closets in the playhouse with shelves for small toys. A third closet, dressed as an entry door to the playhouse, has a window that can serve as a stage for puppet shows.

Junior railway engineers will go for the train storage unit in the room. It features a semi-circle of wall benches that make an off-the-floor play area or sewing facilities. Sliding doors built in the bottom of one bench provide a toy cabinet. The electric train storage problem is solved with a drawer that slides under a bench. Tracks and train scenery can be permanently set up in the drawer, which has retractable legs so it can be raised to make a higher playing area. Other features of Mr. Aronson's room are blinds that camouflage the disorder of a hobby work table and a revolving book rack.

Cheese A First-Class Protein And Much Cheaper Than Meat

By Ida Bailey Allen

WE were driving along the New York State road from Oneonta to Cooperstown.

"There's a famous old cheese factory in Milford we can visit on the way," suggested our host, Mr. H. J. Merrick, Jr.

"In Italy, France and Spain workmen do a hard day's labour on a noon meal of bread, cheese and raw onions," remarked the Chef. "And nowadays we know why. It is because cheese is a first-class protein like meat, and much cheaper."

Soon we drove up to a low, two-storey building. The white-capped and aproned master cheese-maker, George Townsend, answered our ring at the door and kindly took time out to show us around.

"Our big specialty is pineapple cheese which we make between April 1 to June 15," he explained. "We start at 4:45 in the morning when the milk is fresh. These big tanks hold 4,000 lbs. of milk. This is congealed by rennet; lactic acid is added, and the milk is cooked by steam to a thick curd. The whey—that is, the liquid from the milk—is then drawn off; the curd must be thick and crumbly. When cooled and dry, it is pointed under these heavy weights, transferred to these knotted string nets, tied up and steamed. The heat shrinks the nets into the cheese, pulls it into shape, and makes the familiar pineapple markings.

"Step this way and I'll show you. There they are, hundreds of them, hanging four weeks to ripen. Then the nets are removed, the cheeses are shel-lacked, ripened for at least 60 days longer, boxed, and off they go for sale all over the world."

"What do you make the rest of the year?"

"Cheddar cheese, Madam." He opened the door to a huge storeroom filled with Cheddar. "This stands several months to age properly to develop flavour."

"Do you think that most persons eat enough cheese?" asked the Chef.

"No—the per capita consumption is 7.3 lbs. a year—or 2 1/4 ounces a week. Unless he's stubborn, it's my opinion that any man who considers the food value of milk, protein, minerals and vitamins, must agree that cheese is as valuable a food as meat."

"The cheese-maker—strong, thin, ruddy, pleasant-spoken, youthful-looking in spite of decades of long days of hard work—has proved his own statement."

THIS DREAM MEANS:

This dream reveals your secret misgivings — you have not yet dared to admit them even to yourself — about the man you contemplate marrying.

You feel that his personality (symbolised by his face) is blank and means nothing to you. Accepting his ring would be a symbol of your readiness to love him faithfully and completely: evidently you doubt both his ability to hold you and yours to accept him as the dominant figure in your life. The dream is trying to help you to face the unpalatable facts: unless your maternal instinct is unusually strong or your desire for the lover in a man comparatively weak, it would be unwise to marry a man you do not respect.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

CALL TO COLOUR

SOONER or later almost everyone who uses black-and-white films feels the urge to try colour. For colour adds a whole new dimension to the picture-taker's world. The green of budding trees, the blue of the sky, all the colours which surround us in our lives—all make it only natural that we should want to capture their beauty on film.

With modern colour films we can do this almost as easily as we make our everyday black-and-white shots. The same basic picture-taking techniques that make for good monochrome make for good colour shots. And there's a colour film available for almost every type of camera.

So, if you haven't tried colour yet, chances are you will want to. When you do, you will want to study exposure more carefully than if using black-and-white films. For exposure is the hurdle on which the beginner in colour is most likely to trip.

You will remember that not long ago we mentioned the "latitude" of film—the "margin of safety" built into films which permits an acceptable print to be made when the negative has been either under-exposed. At that time we pointed out that most black-and-white films have a rather wide latitude, that you can be a fair step off the proper exposure and get good results. For example, if the best ex-posure for a given scene is 1/50 at f/11, an exposure of 1/50 at f/8 or f/16 will generally yield a fair print.

Colour films have somewhat less latitude than this. You need to judge exposure more carefully. And for best results it's ideal to hit exposure on the nose.

How do you do this? The best way we know is by using a handy, pocket exposure guide. Such a guide gives the basic information needed for proper exposure of almost any type of subject—for clear or overcast days or indoors. And the 10 or 20 cents which you pay for a guide of this type is well spent if it saves you the disappointment of colour shots poorly exposed.

There's one other point that it will pay you to remember when you start using colour. Avoid heavy shadows on your subjects. Shadows often make for striking effects in black-and-white shots, but—as a general rule—with colour full, frontal lighting is preferred. For shots of people, particularly, have the sunlight streaming over your left or right shoulder when you click the shutter.

But try for yourself. You'll find in colour new pleasure in your picture taking. Your photographic dealer will tell you what type of colour film is best suited for use in your camera.

—John van Guilder

Sinclair Lewis signs off in a minor key

WORLD SO WIDE. By Sinclair Lewis Heinemann. 12s. 6d. 249 pages.

AFTER he has killed his ill-tempered wife by an impatient tug at the steering wheel, Hayden Chart, plodding architect in that fast-growing metropolis, New-life, Colorado, decides that opportunity and conscience conspire to utter in his ear the summons to culture.

Confronting his soul in the quiet of the hospital, where he is recovering from the motor accident, Hayden is appalled by his ignorance of the finer things. What does he know of music, Byzantine architecture, chemistry, history before 1776, Goethe, etc.? Is he content to spend the whole of his life quarrelling with mean old women who want marble bathrooms for the price of tiled?

Well, then.

Self-inquisition translates itself into a year's vacation, a ticket to Europe and an Italian grammar. In Cornwall he feels the first lifting of the heart.

In Florence, before he can say zabaglione, Hayden falls in love. First with the brown Arno, the ancient palaces, wonderful churches, and so forth. Later with Dr Olivia Lomond, a decorative but chilly scholar who can spare enough time from the study of medieval manuscripts to flirt with a humbler seeker after ancient wisdom.

Olivia impresses the reader unfavourably as one of those finer things that can easily be omitted from a cultural pilgrimage, and there are few regrets when she deserts Hayden for a more photogenic pilgrim from Hollywood. Hayden consoles himself with Roxanna, a rowdy woman journalist from back home in New-life.

These emotional crises-crossings are of little consequence in a novel whose main concern is to record the response to Italy of one earnest American in search of a "background." This is a story of mild philandering, guide-book in hand, of pauses before the masterpieces. "To find all this with you" of gentle satire at the expense of American expatriates.

by . . . . . GEORGE MALCOLM THOMSON

Lewis's last book is slight, in a minor key and a wistful mood.

★ THE CRADLE OF NEPTUNE. By John Lodwick. Heinemann. 10s. 6d. 285 pages.

WHEN a brilliant uneven and truculent novelist like John Lodwick goes for his theme to his own public school, it is a fair assumption that Alma Mater is in for an unflattering trouncing. On the whole Dartmouth scene of "The Cradle of Neptune" comes well out of the ordeal.

Lodwick brings to fiction a mind singularly free from bias in favour of mankind. Nor is he one of your mealy-mouthed writers determined either to ignore the worst or hint at it. Each page seems to bear at the top an invisible warning "For Men Only."

The future admirals bold for England's sake, on whom Lodwick berds his sardonic gaze include a smoothly vicious boy named Shingle, and Don Carlos, an affable heir-apparent to a continental throne (momentarily overturned by revolution). This prince, who has chosen to be educated at Dartmouth as the only way of escaping the Jesuits, earns among his companions a high reputation as a palmer.

Then there is Carnell who steals postal orders from his comrades, thus giving Roffey (central figure in the story) an opportunity to realise his (only) ambition, that is, get himself expelled by arranging to be caught with the stolen money in his hands.

Roffey is an example of a weakness of Lodwick's—his readiness to sacrifice verisimilitude to wit. Roffey is too adult, clever, determined, desperate, "tough." Lodwick, his creator, would be a still finer novelist were he less of a "show-off." But, let it be said at once, he has plenty of talent to show!

★ MEETING AT THE MILESTONE. By Sigurd Hoel. Secker and Warburg. 13s. 6d. 284 pages.

COUNTLESS novels, seeking to exploit our emotions on behalf of the resistance movements, have ended by boring us. Here is one brushed by the wings of greatness.

The narrator is sent by the secret leaders of the Home Front to investigate a leakage of information in a small Norwegian town. In an atmosphere poisoned with fear and suspicion, he makes startling discoveries. Heidenreich, a local Nazi sympathiser, is an old acquaintance of his from the university; Heidenreich's wife is the girl he had loved and lost while a student; and Heidenreich's son, a fanatical leader of the Nazi party in the town, is in fact his son, whose existence he has never suspected.

To a grim melodrama Hoel brings uneasy insight in motives; ironic writing; humour; above all, a personal lyricism. Best novel this week; an outstanding novel any week.

★ THE WEST PIER. By Patrick Hamilton. Constable. 12s. 8d. 308 pages.

HAMILTON has his own ideas about how to tell a story—and his own ideas of what story to tell. His method is rather dry and old-fashioned. He stags a little apart, prim but unshockable, while the reader calms little asides (the horrid story—and it is a horrid story—unfolds: "Much as we may dislike the character of Gorse, it must be conceded that he did things thoroughly.")

What Gorse did was to swindle a poor young girl out of her life savings. But Gorse, it is plain, will not remain on this lowly rung of the ladder. He has a future. One day his photograph will appear in all the newspapers as the Man with the Hypnotic Eyes. Hamilton deals severely with such sensationalism. "Gorse had no hypnotic quality; all he did was to use common sense and take the greatest pains."

A tale of crime and moral turpitude as it might be told by a solidly middle-aged man with a hand on his hip.

Summer's Over

By KEMP STARRETT

CANUCKS WILL BE OUT TOMORROW TO STOP THE RAMPAGING SAINTS

By "GRANDSTAND"

Wahoos and Squaws meet for the first time this year in the Ladies' League at 3.30 p.m. this afternoon in a showdown, with the Owls defending their title against the opposition from the Squaws which has been growing ever since their initiation into the pastime via the Junior League a couple of seasons back.

Two interesting Senior "A" Division games will also feature this week's card, with St. Joseph's taking on the Canucks at 2.00 p.m. tomorrow, followed immediately by the South China — Pandas rival encounter.

In the Juniors, the Delawares' unblemished record will be jeopardised when they cross bats with the richard Griffins who are all out to upset the Delawares in an effort to keep pace with the leaders, while the Blackhawks should have no difficulty in stretching their winning streak to six-straight.

The Squaws have been dishing out impressive performances in their recent outings, especially last week when they trampled the Pool To squad to a 21-1 humiliation. The Wahoos have also been having their workout against the weaker teams in the circuit, and are ready to take up the challenge—a clash which was postponed once while a few teams invaded Macau a month in the drive for the Portuguese rubber.

Terry Nephtha will be the rubber for the Owls with regular battery-mate, Hilda Sauer, behind the batter, and the remainder of the outfit will be Dolly Mandox at first base, Alice Mendonca and Irene Starks in the circuit, and ready to take up the third-base position, a toss-up between Helene Ribeiro and Gwen Dragon.

The outfields will be Verna Ribeiro, Elsie Thompson and Marie Rull, unless Big Chief Terry Nephtha can persuade Teres Campos to turn out for the vital game.

The Squaws have plenty of talent to select from, and the hurling chair will fall on either Benita Remedios or Marie Gutierrez, depending on the whim of coach Rene Squaw, while Nana Corvacho will take on the hind-sneaking duties, irrespective of whoever tosses the rubber.

Thelma Coelho, who was signed on a few weeks ago, will also be on hand with Carmen Souza and Stella Correa contributing a heavy willow to the effort.

Experienced crystal-gazing eyes have hesitated to foretell the result of any girls' game, and being just a scribe, why should I stick my neck out.

ON THE CREST

Interest in the "A" Division will be centred on the Saints, who are riding on the crest of an on-surge. Can they squeak a Canucks attempt to throw a wrench into the works?

The Canadians have always been a jinx to the Saints, but with their chances for the flag zinging with every game it will be a very determined outfit of Maple Leafers who can stop the rampaging Saints.

Sherry Backs, who has some of the best of the Saints' pitching, is generally for the past few weeks, may be able to res his support for this game, as it is understood that mentor Art Ozorio will pit Tony Kwok against the Canucks.

M. de Khan, however, will still be wearing the iron mask behind the bat, calling the shots.

The duo of Art Ozorio and Dave Leonard around the mid-way cushion is not likely to be changed as this combination has worked well so far, nor is a change at the hot-corner with Benny Omar guarding that spot, even remotely considered.

Jindoo Hussain has earned the first-base berth with a brilliant exhibition against the Braves, but the Blackhawks will be selected from among Khe Hyndman, Shewboat Ali, Al Smirke, L's Castro, Ben Abiorg and Danny Izal.

Picked against this impressive lineup of diamond artists, Canucks Bill Woo will need his strongest side to check for her skidding of the Maple Leaf outfit who have just four in a row. One more setback, and the Canucks can just about wave farewell to the bunting.

Harrie Kasa Nazrin, who has been the Saints' a past, will be out in one more attempt to nuzzle the heavy artillery of the renowned slugs, but his usual support, will be lacking this time as long as some of the registered players continue to be absent.

The final score will be close but the Saints are tipped to take the decision to climb another rung in the League ladder.

WILL SETTLE DIFFERENCES

Both South China and the Pandas having dropped decision to the Overseas Chinese in their private three-way feud, they will settle differences when they meet tomorrow afternoon.

P. C. Wong, on the mound for the Carolines, seen to have lost his magic touch with his slow and tantalising teasers and has been giving out his generously. Perhaps the opposition are catching on, or it may be that Wong has no confidence in the rookie gardening trio.

Wally Mar's Pandas can afford to drop another one with two losses on their record, and make or break, this will be the week for them. Jackie Wei will probably draw the hurling job with Raymond Tsao behind the batter.

Guess who breezed into town this week? None other than Philo Remedios who is still a devout follower of our diamond activities although he spends eleven months of the year in Oklahoma.

Fido has a lot of stories to tell, but somehow or other, Scotty gets into the conversation. Philo says hello to all members of the fraternity.

An elaborate letter from a critic has been received by Commissioner Doc Molten, but unfortunately the author of the lengthy screed could not find sufficient courage to sign his name to it.

The epistle contains several pertinent points but his thirst for information cannot be satisfied without essential information regarding his (or her) identity.

Programme for the weekend:

TODAY: 2.00 p.m. South China v. Blackhawks; Rexes v. Dodgers; 3.30 p.m. Pandas v. Blue Sox (Junior League); Wahoos v. Squaws (Ladies' League).

TOMORROW: 9.30 a.m. Dragons v. Aces (Junior League); 11.00 a.m. Baseballers v. Red Sox (Jr. Division); 12.30 p.m. Delawares v. Griffins (Junior League); 2.00 p.m. St. Joseph's v. Canadians; 3.30 p.m. South China v. Pandas (Senior "A" Division).

South China Look Well Set To Retain The Championship

Says "SPIV"

South China remain the only unbeaten team in the First Division of the Soccer League, which is fast approaching the end of its first round, and even at this early stage look well set to retain the title for another year.

Sing Tao, four points behind and one game in hand, are next with 10 points and Army, with a slightly lower goal average, lie third.

In the Second Division, Kitchee and South China have not lost a game yet, and look as if they will again contest the final.

The two Army teams, 367 SU and RAMC lead in the Third Division.

Only five First Division, five Second Division and seven Third Division games were played during the course of last week.

There were two major upsets in the First Division. Army, who are generally conceded to be the strongest challengers to South China, went down to seventh-placed Chinese Athletic on Saturday by 2-1 in the most sensational upset of the season so far.

Looking back at the game, it is difficult to analyse fully the Army's loss, except that the CAA's winning goal came from a costly error by their goalkeeper, Philipps, when he rolled the ball on to an opposing forward's feet when intending it for one of his own players.

RAF MAY NOT REACH TOP OF THE TABLE

Scorpions are at home to the Royal Air Force in the First Division of the Cricket League this afternoon and there will be a battle royal. Both teams have more batting than bowling and both are capable of going for the runs.

The Scorpions at home are a different proposition to the Scorpions away and the RAF, needing only one point to reach the top of the table—KCC not having a League match this week—may not find it at Chater Road.

Craigengower will entertain the Optimists and have both a design on all four points and the team to take them. This should be another match with 400 runs for the afternoon.

Army "A" take on the University at Soekunpo, probably with one or two fast bowlers added to the team. Should the speed merchants be available this week, all four points will almost certainly be Army's. Royal Navy entertain Army "B" at King's Park.

The Army had their best team out, and all that can be said is that they were off form and inaccurate. It was, however, a resounding triumph for youth, for the CAA XI consisted mainly of youngsters and their fierce tackling was in no small measure responsible for their brilliant win.

The other upset of the week was the 2-1 defeat of the once formidable Kowloon Motor last year's finalists, by Kitchee.

Once again their goal-scoring machine failed to go into action. A rearranged forward line in the second half, after they had conceded two goals, gave them a greater share of the play, but erratic shooting threw away the numerous chances of scoring that they were presented with.

Veteran Lai Shu-wing ably led the Kitchee team and scored the second goal himself with a brilliant header.

TODAY'S BIG GAME

The main attraction of this week-end's games will be the clash between Sing Tao and Army at the Club ground this afternoon, starting at 4 p.m. Both are level on points with Sing Tao enjoying a slightly better goal average.

The losers today will find it difficult to stay in the running of the Championship.

On current form Army will be very lucky to get away with a draw. The Army XI, it is least, practically be the same as that which lost to CAA last week, with the exception of Wilson, who pulled a thigh ligament and will be replaced by Hartman.

Wilson will be sorely missed in this afternoon's match, in which the short-passing tactics of the well-combined Sing Tao forwards should give them a clear advantage.

It's A Matter Of Caps Or Cash

Says W. CAPEL KIRBY

Has anybody given a thought to the players when it was suggested that they get together 10 days before an international match? The FA favour the idea and club directors and managers have had their say.

As one who visits the England camp frequently, I say without fear of contradiction that any increase in the training period would do more harm than good.

My reason for being so emphatic is that the majority of our international class players are involved in some commercial undertaking or another, and are naturally anxious to know how the extra-shelk raking is progressing during their absence.

Even now, in the show time they are in camp, there's a continual procession to and from the telephone, and that doesn't spell relaxation.

Can you blame Bert Williams for wondering how his sports outfitting business is faring, or Tom Finney worrying about his plumber's in-eres? Of course not, and it all comes back to the argument of paying players enough to make football a whole-time profession.

During the week I heard another Trindism for my collection. Referring to Denis Compton's marriage in South Africa, Tommy added: "But what's the good? If they have any sons they'll only play for Charlton."

"The whites' man in the business," is Louis Page's tribute to Tom Whitaker.

Describing how the latest Irish goalkeeping success, Norman Uphard, joined Swindon, he said:

"I was in bed and unable to move when the first and second team trainers reported their goalkeepers out of action. A phone call to Tom, in which there was no mention of a fee, and off went one of my staff to Highbury with a blank cheque. I left it to Tom to fill in the amount, which was £750."

Travelling companions on a long journey such last week.

Kay Cavendish, who deprecates professionalism in her favourite pastime of lawn tennis.

Jack Train: "As a youngster I used to dispatch the Plymouth Argyle half-time score pigeons from Home Park."

Sir Stanley Rous: "Russia's FIFA representatives returned home carrying a warm invitation to send a club side to this country, plus stacks of FA coaching literature."

"Take the handcuffs off our lads and they'll like the world," declares big bluff Sam Cowan, who tells me it was the "happiest day of his life" when he left the managerial chair at Maine-road to resume his physiotherapy practice in Brighton.

"This business of letting 'em kick us around and taking it all like perfect gentlemen is not good enough," says Sam, who considers a great deal of present-day football could be stamped out by the present £750 benefit for the first five years' service, a record of £1,250, and a third of £2,500.

VISITORS COME FROM SPACE

By PAUL VANDEREIKE

Many craters on the moon probably were formed in the same way that the Barringer Crater near Winslow, Arizona, was made—by a visitor from space. The top picture (courtesy of the Mount Wilson Observatory) shows the region of Copernicus, a large moon crater believed to have been formed when a meteorite fell. Note the lines running outward from the crater. The picture below (courtesy of the Denver Museum of Natural History) shows the Barringer Crater. From the air this looks much like a moon crater.

Chirpie and His Bird-Friends

—Some of Them Didn't Act Like Birds at All—

By MAX TRELL

CHIRPIE Sparrow came to the window sill for his morning bread crumbs, and after greeting Knarf and Hanid, the shadow-cuddlers with the turned-about names, he said: "I flew down to the zoo yesterday to visit a bird-friend of mine that I haven't seen for a long time."

"Who?" Knarf asked.

"Penny the Guin," replied Chirpie, helping himself to another crumb. "He's quite a bird."

"You mean Penguin?" said Hanid, who was puzzled by the name Penny the Guin.

Paid Him a Visit

"That's the one, Penguin. But I call him Penny the Guin. He calls himself something else. I forget what it is. Anyway, I went down to the zoo to pay him a visit. There he was standing on the edge of a large pool filled with ice-cold water. I never saw such a bird for swimming in ice-cold water."

"Oh, does he swim?" Knarf asked in surprise.

"Does he swim? I should say so. He swims as well as three fish put together. And none of your duck-geese paddling on top of the water, either. He swims under the water. When he ever learned how to swim that way is more than I can understand."

"Penguins come from the South Pole," said Hanid. "It's very cold down there. That's why your friend Penny the Guin likes ice-cold water."

"I guess so," said Chirpie. "Penguins are wonderful underwater swimmers all right," Hanid continued. "Only they're not very good birds."

"En? How do you mean that?" Chirpie said, looking very puzzled. He almost dropped a crumb out of his mouth.

"Why, they can't fly, Chirpie. Everyone knows that."

Swims Underwater

Chirpie nodded sadly. "That's the trouble," he said. "Penny the Guin can swim underwater. But he can't fly in the air. I can fly in the air but I can't swim underwater."

Chirpie had a few more crumbs. Then he continued. "There are a few other bird-friends of mine who can do things that most birds can't do. But each do what most other birds can do."

Knarf and Hanid asked Chirpie to tell them what birds he had in mind.

"Well, there's Owl the Rich. He's an enormous bird and—"

"I flew down to the zoo yesterday to visit a bird-friend," said Chirpie Sparrow.

Much Different

Knarf and Hanid both agreed that not being able to see somebody was much different from somebody not being able to see you.

"But, the strangest and most wonderful bird of all is—humph, I don't know what his name is. I often see him, though. He stands in the window of a barber shop in the middle of town."

"What does he look like?" Hanid wanted to know.

"Like a parrot. But he doesn't talk. He also doesn't move. He doesn't eat. He doesn't sing, or chirp, or crow, or caw, or honk, or scream. He never does anything but stand in the window and look out."

"And he can't fly?" said Knarf in surprise.

"Maybe he can, but he doesn't. And he doesn't hop, or walk, or run."

"He must be a stuffed bird," said Hanid.

"That's what I think," agreed Chirpie. And suddenly Chirpie stopped eating the crumbs on the window sill. "Oh—I better not eat any more. I don't want to be stuffed—not me!"

And the next second he flapped his wings and flew off, just as sure he still could fly.

Chirpie had a few more crumbs. Then he continued. "There are a few other bird-friends of mine who can do things that most birds can't do. But each do what most other birds can do."

Knarf and Hanid asked Chirpie to tell them what birds he had in mind.

"Well, there's Owl the Rich. He's an enormous bird and—"

"Oh, yes," said Hanid. "He's in the zoo, isn't he?"

Chirpie nodded sadly. "That's the trouble," he said. "Penny the Guin can swim underwater. But he can't fly in the air. I can fly in the air but I can't swim underwater."

ON a clear night we often watch "shooting stars," and perhaps make a wish for the best things in the world and wonder if the wish will really come true. But the "shooting stars" we watch are not stars at all, they are what men of science call meteors. If they reach the earth, the bits of metal and stone are no longer called meteors, but meteorites.

These visitors from space vary greatly in size, from tiny particles, small as grains of wheat, to huge boulders weighing tons. One of the large ones fell near Winslow, Arizona, many years ago and made a crater three-fourths of a mile across and 600 feet deep.

Dr. H. H. Nininger, who has made a life-long study of meteorites, has established a meteorite museum at Winslow, a few miles from this crater. Dr. Nininger thinks a comet may have struck the earth about 20,000 or more years ago and made the crater.

The deep hole is called the Barringer Crater, after Dr. D.M. Barringer, who first advanced the idea that it was of meteoritic origin. Nowadays the origin has been definitely established, but as late as 1923 some geologists believed the crater was caused by a sub-surface volcanic explosion.

Meanwhile a smaller crater of meteoritic origin was found near Odessa, Texas, and then 13 such craters were discovered in 1931 in Australia.

Exploration of the vicinity of Barringer Crater produced about 10 tons of iron meteorites within a radius of five miles, leaving little doubt what caused the crater. Then astronomers, studying the moon, decided that the vast majority of its craters are also of meteoritic origin, and these moon craters look very much like the Barringer Crater, except of course those on the moon are miles across while the Arizona hole is less than a mile in diameter.

MANY meteors, that is "shooting stars" which we see at night in the sky, are about the size of wheat grains. When they travel through space there is no air, but when they strike our atmosphere they meet friction from the air, grow hot and most of them, because they are so small, burn up before they reach the earth.

There are two main types of meteorites, the iron type and the earthy type, but some contain both iron and earth. The iron usually contains other metals, including from two to five percent nickel, while the earthy ones have no metal. In a few, small and not very valuable diamonds have been found.

Several things enable a scientist to recognize a meteorite from ordinary stone and minerals. The colour is dark, which may be only the outer crust and the interior being light. Iron types may turn a rusty brown after lying in the ground for some time.

The shape varies greatly, with no sharp edges, showing more or less fusion, or melting together. Some of the meteorites have a pitted surface or a surface covered with granules called "chondrules." These may be microscopic to several millimetres in diameter.

If you find a meteorite, or a stone suspected of being a meteorite, show it to some mineralogist who specializes in them, such as Dr. Nininger of Winslow, Arizona.

On November 12, 1833, the earth passed through a swarm of meteors which produced a picturesque spectacle of a meteor shower. It was so frightening that many people interpreted it as a sign of the approaching end of the world.

In 1866 and 1867 the shower was repeated, but on a smaller scale. The swarm originated from a comet which had a period of revolution around the sun of about 33 years. But in time the meteoric matter had become more or less evenly distributed along the comet's orbit so that now we have a display every year when the earth crosses the path of the comet's old orbit. So in November you may look for this display of meteors. It won't be as spectacular as that in 1833, but it will be noticeable.

There are other showers in April and August. All are thought to be the remains of certain comets. The attraction of Jupiter, Saturn and Uranus causes the intensity of the meteor showers to vary.

THE greatest meteorite fall in historic time occurred June 30, 1908, in Siberia. It laid waste several hundred square miles of forest, flattening it to the ground. Dwellings 80 to 50 miles away were wrecked and a large herd of reindeer which had been feeding in the vicinity of the impact was completely destroyed.

There are two main types of meteorites, the iron type and the earthy type, but some contain both iron and earth. The iron usually contains other metals, including from two to five percent nickel, while the earthy ones have no metal. In a few, small and not very valuable diamonds have been found.

JACOBY ON BRIDGE

Take Some Coaxing
 When You Bid

By OSWALD JACOBY

MY advice on the bidding of certain hands is to copy the strategy of the shy young maiden. Take plenty of coaxing to land exactly where you wanted to be in the first place.

In today's hand, for example, South is pretty sure that North has five or six spades to the ace and a singleton for his raise to four spades. Where could the singleton be? Not in hearts, where South was not conceivably in clubs, but more probably in diamonds. There was no doubt about it when West went to five diamonds.

South knew he could make six spades, but he wanted to be coaxed. So he let West nudge him into the slam. Then West doubled happily. There was no plea to the hand of course. West could take one diamond trick and then South could lead his hand. West bid his hand as well. The reason becomes clear when we see what happened in the subsequent play. The hand was played in a very smart way.

The South player went to five diamonds. The hand was played in a very smart way.

other West had seven diamonds as a sacrifice. South decided it was time for him to step in and put an end to the monkey system. He therefore doubled seven diamonds. Everybody passed and North completed the set of spades down on the table as an opening lead. Thereupon West called drew trumps and led the heart. Thirteen of the oldest tricks were won.

Now we can see the difference between the two styles of bidding. The young maiden winds up with a point of 1660 points. The old man in a china shop winds up with a loss of 1,320 points. The difference between the styles was 3,220 points on a single hand.
